

Dr. William Oliver is an Associate Professor in the Department of Criminal Justice at Indiana University. He served as a member of the Institute on Domestic Violence in the African American Community Steering Committee, University of Minnesota, from 1996-2008. His primary area of research examines the social context and interpersonal dynamics associated with violent confrontations among African Americans. His book, The Violent Social World of Black Men has been praised for its revealing analysis of the interpersonal and intrapersonal dynamics of violent confrontations that occur among black men in street corner social settings. Furthermore, his paper, "Black Males and Social Problems-Prevention through Afrocentric Socialization"(1989) is the 4th most frequently cited paper published in the Journal of Black Studies in the last 40 years. In addition, he has also conducted research in Bermuda, in which he examined how incarcerated violent offenders perceived the causes of street violence in Bermuda and the various turning points that led them to commit acts of street violence. His more recent work has focused on the intersection of prisoner reentry and intimate partner violence in the African American community. Prior to coming to academia full time, Oliver worked as a criminal justice policy analyst for the New York State Division of Criminal Justice Services and as an alcohol/corrections specialist for the New York State Commission on Corrections. Oliver has also held academic appointments at the University of Delaware and the University of Missouri.

Professor Oliver received his B.S. in political science from Tuskegee University and his masters and Ph.D. in criminal justice from the School of Criminal Justice at the State University of New York at Albany. Oliver was born and raised in upstate New York.
