

Nicole E. Randolph is the Parent and Community Liaison at Nellie Stone Johnson School in North Minneapolis. She has received national recognition in the 2010 from John Hopkins University, National Network for Partnership Schools, Best Practices for Safe Routes to School implementation. In addition to this role in Minneapolis Public Schools, Nicole writes curriculum and facilitates Lead Peace classes offered to middle schools students at Nellie Stone Johnson School. Lead Peace is a middle school service-learning program with goals to improve school connectedness and academic success, increase positive community involvement, and reduce the risks for violence. Nicole is a native of Boston, Massachusetts and has 20 years of youth advocacy, leadership, development and violence prevention experience.